OUNTRY DEALERS, TAKE NOTICE!

The pressure for admittance into the Court room is, by no means, so great as on previous days. The general impression yes terday seemed to be that the trial would be consided to-day, but it is now evident that the negument on instructions will be spun out so as to prevent that before Monday.

Carliele notified the Judge that Bredhead was in Court, and satisfactority explained the cause of bis not inving been there ber fore.

The Sickles Trial - Eighteenth Day. The pressure for admittance into the Richard Brodhead testified he was ac-quaisted with Sickles, saw him on the day of the homicide and was walking out, and met my friend Haldeman, of Harrisborg, and we called on Judgs Black. When Mr. Sickles came I introduced him to Mr. Haldeman; a few words passed between Sickles and Haldeman on Pennsylvania politica. I called Sickles, attention to some mad on I called Sickles' attention to some mud on boots, and he left the room to take it off; re turned soon, and I heard footstells on the stairs; he immediately rose and stepped out as if to meet the person. He was out some time; in a minute or two Judge Black came in very much excited. After some time Sickles Haldeman and myself stepped up to him, Haldeman acting as spokesman. Secdeman tendered our services to go with him to a magistrate. He thanked us, I naked him if it was a bailable offenss. He said he did not know but that if all the facts were known it would be. He then added, "For God knows I would be justified for I could not help it." Argument on instructions commenced by Mr. Carlisle for prosecution, followed by Mr. Stanton for defence, occupying the entire day.

Senator Douglas occupied a sent at the lawyers' table, and appeared much interests ed in Mr. Stanton's eloquent argument for $1,42@1.45.
